Director Training

The role of a director is accompanied by responsibility. If it is not taken seriously or the correct rules and procedures are not followed, incurring penalties and fines is a real possibility. With an ever-increasing amount of legislation surrounding the role, it is increasingly important to minimise the risk of non-compliance with the law by staying properly up-to-speed with the requirements of being a director.

Why attend?

Our Director Training course is presented by experts at Berg Legal who will introduce the general principles and legal implications of being a director and provides an explanation of the responsibilities and pitfalls of the position. Areas covered in the course include:

- What does it mean to be a director?
- Legal structure of the business
- Importance of strategy for the business
- HR issues
- Directors' duties
- Directors' liability
- Corporate responsibility

What does it involve?

During this full day workshop we use case studies to examine the legal aspects of director's roles, duties and responsibilities, together with question and answer sessions and general group discussion to facilitate director involvement and understanding. The course commences at 10am, finishing at 4pm, either at your offices or at another suitable venue.

How much does it cost?

Fees are competitive and vary depending on the size of your business and requirements. We will be pleased to quote.
